I'm looking forward to meeting many global LNG leaders in face to face to share each view toward the critical role of LNG and gas in both energy security and decarbonisation.

Due to the recent situation, securing stable energy supply is now a critical and urgent issue not only in Japan, but also in Europe and the rest of the world.

To continue to position LNG and gas as important energies in the future, it is important to secure LNG supply volume and affordable prices.

As Mr. Nishimura, the Minister of Economy, Trade and Industry stated at the LNG Producer-Consumer Conference held in Japan last month, "cooperation" is needed between countries, and between the public and private sectors.

Tokyo Gas will continue to make the maximum efforts to ensure stable energy supply around the world.

Achieving both stable energy supply and decarbonization is now a major issue. Energy conservation from both the demand-side and supply side is also important.

We will achieve a low-carbon or fully decarbonized society and ensure sustainable development of the global LNG industry.
